

HELLO
CLOUD CUCKOO

CREATURE KIN

We are a group of Berlin-based artists exploring themes of monstrosity, otherness, more-than-human kinship and expression from within our positions as queer & trans performers.

Our last project is Mushroom Tales from the End of the World
a drag theater performance
inspired by fungal life
and mycelial intelligence.

We would like to propose a short version adapted to Pictoplasma's format.

Last summer we had an exhibition at Acud Macht Neu
Creature Kin for Monstrous Times, that we inaugurated with a show & party with live performances, dj sets and immersive installations.

Creature kin is a mainly self-funded project.

MUSHROOM TALES

FROM THE END OF THE WORLD

a drag theater performance
inspired by fungal life
and mycelial intelligence

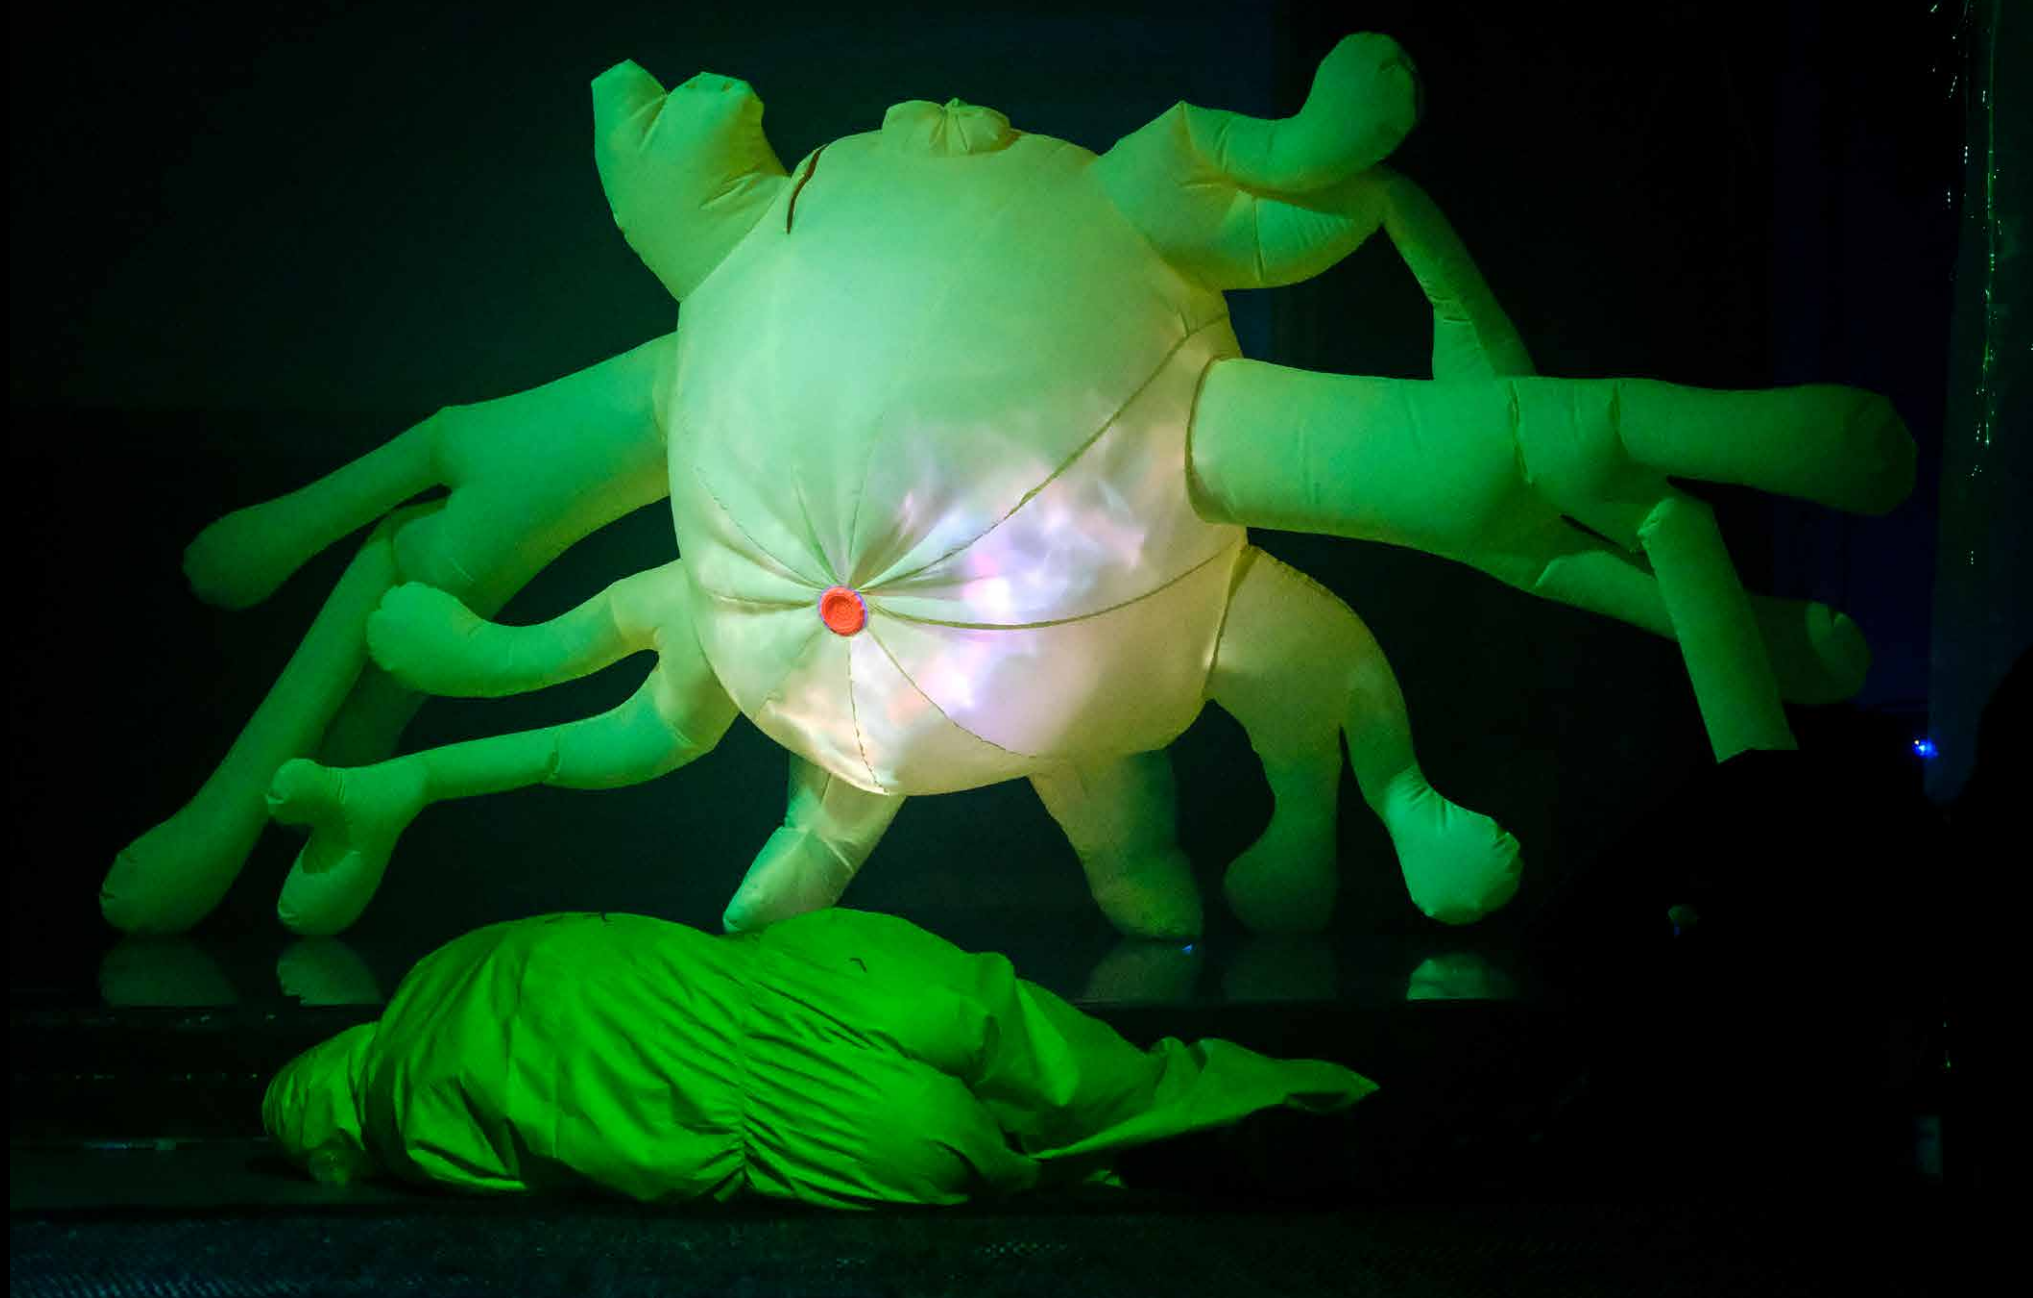

CONCEPT

Through drag, storytelling, movement, and speculative world-building, the piece explores what humans might learn from fungi about collaboration, survival, and transformation in times of ecological and social collapse.

Set in a post-apocalyptic Ferriopolis, the performance follows an obsessive mycologist searching for answers to human-made destruction. Along the way, he encounters mischievous fungal beings—tricksters, mess-mates, and undergrowth transformers—who challenge dominant ideas of “nature,” progress, and the human/nature divide.

Mushroom Tales invites audiences into a queer, mycelial future where boundaries dissolve and new ways of living and being emerge.

The audience becomes part of the ecosystem through shared rituals, masks, objects, and breath, forming a temporary community grounded in care and vulnerability. The performance space itself functions as a living network, where bodies, sounds, and movement circulate like spores.

As the mycologist undergoes ego dissolution and gradual “fungalization,” the narrative shifts from survival to symbiosis. Identity becomes porous, authorship dissolves, and “I” turns into “we.” Mushroom Tales from the End of the World proposes a posthuman, queer, and relational vision of the future—one where hierarchies are composted, messiness is embraced, and new forms of kinship emerge from decay.

Format: Immersive drag theatre performance

Duration: ~60 minutes

Performers: 5-9

Language: English/Non-verbal

Showreel: <https://youtube.com/shorts/gUFQEbXu820>

Full Show: <https://youtu.be/mt4YjeSyx2Q?si=4S1lqu80jfYU7K7m&t=2>

Space

- Indoor theatre or black box space (preferred)
- Minimum stage size: 5 × 5 m, minimum ceiling height: 3 m
- Adaptable for non-theatre or outdoor spaces if required
- Suitable for general audiences

Sound, Power & Lighting

- Basic PA system with playback capability (AUX/Bluetooth/XLR)
- Stage lighting setup including:
 - Spotlights
 - RGBA ambient wash
 - Strobe light
 - Fog/haze machine
- Standard power supply on stage and backstage
- On-site technician on performance day
- Technical run-through on show day or earlier

Costumes & Props

- All costumes and props provided by performers
- No fire, pyrotechnics, or hazardous effects
- Minor use of liquid on stage (water-based)

Backstage (Required)

- Private changing area within the venue
- Space for 5-9 performers to change simultaneously
- Adequate lighting and mirrors for makeup and costume preparation
- Access to restroom facilities nearby

Additional Requirements (Recommended)

- Access to stage at least 2-3 hours before performance for setup and warm-up
- Secure storage space for props and personal belongings
- House technician familiar with venue equipment

Mushroom Tales is designed as a modular work and can be easily adapted for the festival context.

We're happy to create a shorter version or adjust
the amount of numbers to suit
programming needs, space,
or time constraints.

The Mushrooms
also work well
as roaming performances!

The Mycologist

Look: changes from hazmat into mycelial

Backstory: Things are about to get fruiting weird for this fungi-obsessed mycologist, stumbling through the post-collapse city trying to charm humanity's salvation out of a mushroom like it's an ancient bioluminescent oracle. Bless his heart — he has no idea what kind of queer, cosmically chaotic, reality-bending sporeful transformation is already tip-toeing up his hazmat suit.

Artist: Fox @foragedbyfox

Femmeboyant

Look: a transmuting, inflatable creature with a mycelial surprise

Backstory: Femmeboyant is a shapeshifting creature that is both proudly awkward and flamboyant, silly and melancholic. As a strange organism also known as dog vom-it slime mold, at once individual and then collective, they spill ooze through constructed human boundaries, celebrating death and rebirth with alien curiosity and playfulness.

Artist: @femme.boyant

The Tricksters

Ametyst Deceiver

Trickster

Look: purple, mischevious, non-binary

Backstory: Serving mycelial fantasy, they're your new favorite purple snack! Amethyst Deceiver is a Quing with gills, here to spread some spores, spill some T and fuck up the binary. They won't just make you question your sexuality, but also your species...

Artist: Simka Senyak @simkasenyak

Bearded Milkcap

Trickster

Look: hairy, intersex, pinkish, furry, sexy

Backstory: Lactarius torminosus, known in English as the Bearded milkcap and in Finnish as karvarousku, is a shaggy draggy quing and a genderbending forest mother. In Finnish this milky MILF (mushroom I'd like to find/f*ck) is commonly referred to as "the fur purse", and their fruit(y) body oozes a white liquid scientifically called latex.

Artist: Elsa Pakkasvirta @pakkasvirtahepo

Glamanita

Look: glamorous, decadent, dripping spores, red, white, sexy

Backstory: Glamanita is the original forest diva—misunderstood for centuries and now making a very glamorous comeback. They're here to flirt, heal, spread their spores, and serve pure fruit body-ody-ody... but be warned: they might accidentally inoculate your feelings.

Artist: @hannahwhitlow_

Kaleidocelium

Look: light, dreamy, body percussions, earthy

Backstory: Kaleidolicious moves between genders, languages, and melodies, transforming into shifting shapes and colours. Becoming Kaleidocelium, they root into a distant forest and tap into an endless underground network, pulsing through borders with playful rhythms and connecting with fungi, soil, plants, animals, and other unruly beings.

Artist: @kaleidolicious

Queen Cordyceps

Look: Tall, regal, glowing mushroom sprouts, glam, dom

Backstory: Diva Spora got too intimate with a patch of mycelium during a somatic forest flirtation and never fully came back. Now they're a fungus-human hybrid, serving endosymbiosis, softness, and survival in the apocalypse.

Artist: Lux @stefiliciouslux

Niksa

Look: monster, horror, poisonous, teathy

Backstory: Niksa is a mycelial drag creature slipping into this world like a shared hallucination, where innocence distorts and something hungrier begins to bloom.

Artist: @niksa.askin

Vinny von Vinci

Look: distorted, vulva-like, part of the set design, morphing

Backstory: Born from rot, and pungent with a lust for everything the forest has to offer. Vinny von Vinci pops into the slimy, stinky baskethorn partyfavor you have never asked for.

Artist: @vinnyvonvinci

Jo Sordini

scriptwriting, production, artistic direction

Jo is a designer and artist, and one of the driving forces behind Creature Kin, a group of Berlin-based performers exploring themes of monstrosity, otherness and more-than-human kinship. Here, they organize workshops and events, and perform as their alter ego, Femmeboyant.

Their creations and performances are playful investigations into social constructs, multilayered narratives translating into surreal, colourful aesthetics and sensual objects.

@realityisfictional

Noah Fox

scriptwriting, production

Fox is a forager, wild food chef, artist and workshop facilitator. He leads workshops and guided tours on plants and mushrooms, including Queer Mycology Walks through Berlin's forests — cultivating community, sharing knowledge and passion, and exploring "Fungal Futures" as a lens for resilience and transformation.

With a background in theatre and theatre pedagogy, Fox brings performative storytelling into his work, blending sensory experience with ecological education, inviting participants to re-enchant their relationship with the natural world. He also caters for events and retreats.

BECOMING OTHERS

A two-day workshop exploring the power and potentials of monstrosity, kinship and transhuman embodiments.

What do creatures, freaks and monsters reveal about ourselves and our society?

And how can we encounter and embody these “others” and our own monstrous parts in a politically meaningful way?

The first day we dive into some basics of monster theory, before working on our own alter egos and start creating small latex prosthetics. On day two, we transform into our monstrous personas with the help of our self-made prosthetic props, drag make-up and a series of movement and improv games.

Ending the day with a photo shooting and the possibility to play and interact as our creatury selves.
